A WEEK IN SOCIETY

CHINAWARE FOR DINNER SERVICE HAS TAKEN UP A NEW FASHION.

Reyal Wettin Ware New Coming to This Country-Movement of People in Society.

popular. Fashions in china ware are as tranto have its day. Of all the chinas Dresden tations in cheaper wares do much to lessen the favor in which chinas of any kind are held. There has been such a penchant for Dresden that manufacturers have sought to repeat the designs in every known ware and fabric, so much so that whole apartments are furnished in the Dresden patterns. The craze for old china has been so great that manufacturers have duplicated the old wares with such a nicety and, after becoming broken, has been picked up, mended and placed in the collections, duly labeled as having belonged to such and such a royal personage or family. Royalty has factories which design and make for them exclusive pieces. When anything happens to these, Americans, especially, are glad to seize upon them and bring them home for their cabi-nets. They point with pride to the places where the china has been mended.

the merchants is the royal Wettin. This has in nearly every piece a band of yellowmakes. The border of green has some traceries of gold, and in the center is a de-Watteau pictures. The Wettin, when made graceful. The jardinieres that will adorn them this season are unique. The colors description. They are in what is known as the Burmantofts ware. The colors are duller than the dealers have been using, and soft grays on dull greens prevail. There are some of the funniest little plates for decoration ever brought out. They are in the Sorreguemine china. This is a yellowish china, and the designs are exceedingly French. The pictures on them will please the children, and for dining room decoration they are desirable. They are conveniently arranged with perforations, so they may be hung. The old blue and white china, called the Delft, has made its appearance in the handsomest clocks, wall pockets and letter holders one can imagine. For the rooms which so many are furnishing in a special color, the Delft can be had in almost any piece one wants. The blue and white china which the grandmothers used comes the nearest to the Delft of any, and for that reason it is another of the varieties of china which will be popular for all time. One can get a vase to match any color, tint or shade of flower that grows, and the new lavenders, which come for the pretty shades in asters, are among the novelties of the early season.
